And, jumping down from the window seat, he began to dance round his much perturbed comrade, hawking, Ramsey bore with him for a moment, then sprang upon him; they wrestled vigorously, broke a chair and went to the floor with a crash that gave the chandelier in Mrs. Melg's parlor, below, an attack of jingles.

"You let me up!" Fred gasped. "You take your solemn oath to shut up? You golly to swear it?" "All right. I give my solemn oath," said Fred; and they rose, arranging their tousled attire.

"Well," said Fred, "when you golly to call on her?" "You look here!" Ramsey approached him dangerously. "You just gave me your sol—"

"I beg!" Fred cried, retreating. "I mean, aside from all that, why, I just thought maybe after such an evening you'd feel as a gentleman you ought to go and ask after her health." "Now, see here—"

"No, I mean it; you ought to," Fred insisted, earnestly, and as his roommate glared at him with complete suspicion, he added, in explanation, "You ought to go next Callers' Night, and send in your card, and say you felt you ought to ask if she'd suffered any from the night air. Even if you couldn't manage to say that, you ought to start to say it, anyhow, because you—Keep off o' me! I'm only tryin' to do you a good turn, ain't I?"

"You save your good turns for yourself," Ramsey growled, still advancing upon him. But the insidious Mitchell, evading him, fled to the other end of the room, picked up his cap and changed his manner. "Come on, ole bag o' bones, let's be on our way to the 'frat house'; it's time. We'll call this all off."

"You better!" Ramsey warned him; and they trotted out together.

But as they went along, Fred took Ramsey's arm confidentially, and said: "Now, honestly, Ram, ole man, when are you golly to—"

"Ramsey was still red. 'You look here! Just say one more word—'

"Oh, no," Fred expostulated. "I mean seriously, Ramsey. Honestly, I mean seriously. Aren't you seriously golly to call on her some Callers' Night?"

"No, I'm not!" "But why not?"

"Because I don't want to."

"Well, seriously, Ramsey, there's only one Callers' Night before vacation, and so I suppose it hardly will be worth while; but I expect you'll see quite a little of her at home this summer."

"No, I won't. I won't see her at all. She isn't golly to be home this summer, and I wouldn't see anything of her if she was."

"Where's she golly to be?" "In Chicago."

"She is?" said Fred, slyly. "When'd she tell you?"

Ramsey turned on him. "You look out! She didn't tell me. I just happened to see in the Bulletin she's signed up with some other girls to go and do settlement work in Chicago. Anybody could see it. It was printed out plain. You could have seen it just as well as I could, if you'd read the Bulletin."

"Oh," said Fred. "Now look here—"

"Good heavens! Can't I even say 'oh'?"

"It depends on the way you say it."

"I'll be careful," Fred assured him, earnestly. "I really and honestly don't mean to get you excited about all this, Ramsey. I can see myself you haven't changed from your old opinion of Dora Yocum a bit. I was only tryin' to get a little rise out of you for a minute, because of course, seriously, why, I can see you hate her just the same as you always did."

"Yes," said Ramsey, disarmed and guileless in the face of diplomacy. "I only told you about all this, Fred, because it seemed—well, it seemed so kind o' funny to me."

Fred affected not to hear. "What did you say, Ramsey?"

Ramsey looked vaguely disturbed. "I said—why, I said it all seemed kind o'—"

He paused, then repeated plaintively: "Well, to me, it all seemed kind o'—kind o' funny."

"What did?" Fred inquired, but as he glanced in seeming misgivance at his companion, something he saw in the latter's eye warned him, and suddenly Fred thought it would be better to run.

Ramsey chased him all the way to the "frat house."

CHAPTER XI.

Ramsey was not quite athletic enough for any of the "varsity teams"; neither was he an antagonist safely encountered, whether in play or in earnest; and during the next few days he taught Fred Mitchell to be cautious. The chaffer learned that his own agility could not save him from Ramsey, and so found it wiser to contain an effervescence which sometimes threatened to burst him. Ramsey as a victim was a continuous temptation, he was so good-natured and yet so furious.

After Commencement, when the roommates had gone home, Mr. Mitchell's caution extended over the long sunshiny months of summer vacation; he broke it but once and then in well-advised safety, for the occasion was semi-public. The two were out for a stroll on a July Sunday afternoon; and up and down the street young couples lolled along, young families and baby carriages straggled to and from the houses of older relatives, and the rest of the world of that growing city was reeking and fanning itself on its front veranda.

"Here's a right pretty place, isn't it, Ramsey, don't you think?" Fred remarked innocently, as they were passing a lawn of short-clipped, bright green grass before a genial-looking house, fresh in white paint and cool in green-and-white awnings. A broad veranda, well populated just now, crossed the front of the house; fine trees helped the awnings to give comfort against the sun; and Fred's remark was warranted. Nevertheless, he fell under the suspicion of his companion, who had begun to evince some nervousness before Fred spoke.

"What place you mean?" "The Yocum place," said Mr. Mitchell. "I hear the old gentleman's mighty prosperous these days. They keep things up to the mark, don't they, Ramsey?"

"I don't know whether they do or whether they don't," Ramsey returned shortly.

Fred appeared to muse regretfully. "It looks kind of empty now, though," he said, "with only Mr. and Mrs. Yocum and their married daughters, and eight or nine children on the front porch!"

"You wait till I get you where they can't see us!" Ramsey warned him fiercely.

"You can't do it!" said Fred, manifesting triumph. "We'll both stop right here in plain sight of the whole Yocum family connection (all you promise not to touch me.)"

And he leaned back impudently against the Yocum's iron fence. Ramsey was scandalized.

"Come on!" he said hoarsely. "Don't stop here!"

"I will, and if you go to stand right here with all of 'em lookin' at you until—"

"I promise! My heavens, come on!"

Fred consented to end the moment of agony; and for the rest of the summer found it impossible to persuade Ramsey to pass that house in his company. "I won't do it!" Ramsey told him. "Your word of honor means nothing to me; you're liable to do anything that comes into your head, and I'm gettin' old enough to not get a reputation."

Dora was charmingly dressed, and she was pale; but those notable eyelashes of hers were all the more notable against her pallor. And as she spoke with fire, it was natural that her color should come back quite flamingly and that her eyes should flash in shelter of the lashes. "The Christian Spirit and Internationalism" was her subject, yet she showed no meek example of a Christian Spirit herself when she came to attacking war-munkers generally, as well as all those "half-developed tribesmen" and "victims of herd instinct" who believed that war might ever be justified under any circumstances of atrocity. She was eloquent, true, and a picture of grace and girlish dignity, even when she was most vigorous. Nothing could have been more militant than her denunciation of militarism.

"She's an actual wonder," Fred said, when the two had got back to Mrs. Melg's afterward. "Don't you look at me like that; I'm talkin' about her as a public character, and there's nothin' personal about it. You let me alone."

Ramsey was not clear as to his duty. "Well—"

"If any person makes a public speech," Fred protested, "I got a perfect right to discuss 'em, no matter what you think of 'em"—and he added hastily—"or don't think of 'em!"

"Look here—"

"Good heavens!" Fred exclaimed. "You aren't expectin' to interfere with me if I say anything about that little fat Werder girl that argued for Germany, are you? Or any of the other speakers? I got a right to talk about 'em just as public speakers, haven't I? Well, what I say is: Dora Yocum as an orator is just an actual perfect wonder. Got any objections?"

"N-no."

tion for born seen with people that act the idiot on the public streets. No, sir; we'll walk around the block—at least, we will if you're golly with me!"

And to Fred's delight, though he concealed it, they would make this detour.

The evening after their return to the university both were busy with their trunks and various orderings and disorderings of their apartment, but Fred several times expressed surprise that his roommate should be content to remain at home; and finally Ramsey comprehended these implications.

Mrs. Melg's chandelier immediately flung with the shock of another crash upon the floor above.

"You let me up!" Fred commanded thickly, his voice muffled by the pile of blankets, sweaters, underwear and raincoats, wherein his head was being forced to burrow. "You let me up, darn you! I didn't say anything." And upon his release he complained that the attack was unprovoked. "I didn't say anything on earth to even hint you might want to go out and see if anybody in particular had got back to college yet. I didn't even mention the name of Dora Yocum—Keep off o' me! My goodness, but you are sensitive!"

As a matter of fact, neither of them saw Dora until the first meeting of the Luncheon, whether they went as sophomores to take their pleasure in the agony of freshmen debaters. Ramsey was now able to attend the Luncheon, not with complacency but at least without shuddering over the recollection of his own spectacular first appearance there. He had made subsequent appearances, far from brilliant, yet not disgraceful, and as a spectator, at least, he usually felt rather at his ease in the place. It cannot be asserted, however, that he appeared entirely at his ease this evening after he had read the "Programme," chalked upon the large easel blackboard beside the chairman's desk. Three "Freshman Debates" were announced and a "Sophomore Oration," this last being followed by the name, "D. Yocum, '18." Ramsey made immediate and conspicuous efforts to avoid sitting next to his roommate, but was not so adroit as to be successful. However, Fred was merciful; the fluctuations of his friend's complexion were an inspiration more to pity than to badinage.

The three debates all concerned the "Causes of the War in Europe," and honors appeared to rest with a small and stout, stolidly "pro-German" girl debater, who had brought with her and translated at slight abso-oot proofs (so she called them), printed in German, that Germany had been attacked by Belgium at the low instigation of the avowed English. Everybody knew it wasn't true; but she made an impression and established herself as a debater, especially as her introduction was quite confounded by her introduction of printed matter.

"Well, What I Say is: Dora Yocum, as an Orator, Is Just an Actual Perfect Wonder. Got Any Objections?"

When the debates and the verdicts were concluded, the orator appeared, and Fred's compassion extended itself so far that he even refrained from looking inquisitively at the boy in the seat next to his; but he made one side of a wager, mentally—that if Ramsey had consented to be thoroughly confidential just then, he would have confessed to feeling kind o' funny.

Dora was charmingly dressed, and she was pale; but those notable eyelashes of hers were all the more notable against her pallor. ASSUME RAIL CONTROL U. S. MARKET REPORT

Fuel Is Given First Place in I. C. C. Priority Order.

Order Directs All Railroads to Move Traffic Over the Most Direct Route.

Washington, July 27.—The federal government has assumed control of all coal distribution and the railroad facilities engaged in the transportation of this class of fuel, foodstuffs and fuel oil.

The priority order on foods and fuels applies to the railroads east of the Mississippi river. A separate order directs all the railroads in the United States to move traffic over the most direct routes.

The plan for the coal distribution as outlined by Secretary Hoover was unanimously adopted here at a conference of mine operators, railway officials and government representatives.

The Interstate commerce commission at once issued an order establishing priority for the movement of coal and procedure at the various rail centers.

President Harding will appoint judicial tribunals to adjust the coal situation within a week, irrespective of emergency efforts now being made to avert a fuel crisis.

The purpose of these quasi-judicial bodies will be to stabilize the coal industry. Miners and operators will be excluded except to the extent of pleading their cause before these tribunals.

The White House made this public following the extensive cabinet meeting at which only the two major industrial problems, coal and railroads, were discussed.

LIVING COST UP 66.6 PER CENT

Rise Since 1914, According to Figures Made Public by Federal Department of Labor.

Washington, July 28.—The cost of living in the United States has risen 66.6 per cent since 1914, according to figures made public by the Department of Labor.

In spite of this rise, however, prices now are not at the peak, the figures showed, as the cost of living in June, 1922, was 23 per cent lower than it was in June, 1920.

Food prices were higher in June than in March, while clothing, fuel and light and other staples were slightly lower.

RUSSIA TOPS THE WORLD

Moscow Officials Resort to Astronomical Arithmetic in Calculating the State Budget.

Berlin, July 31.—Soviet Russia can claim the distinction of being the top of the world in the matter of large figures in the state budget. The budget commission at Moscow has just worked out the Russian budget for the last quarter of 1922.

In making the budget the commission had to resort to astronomical arithmetic. The receipts for the year are estimated at 300 trillion rubles and the expenditures at 700 trillion rubles, leaving a deficit of 400 trillion.

New Ruling on Special Mail.

Washington, July 27.—Special delivery letters will not be sent out from any post office in the country after eleven o'clock at night, under new postal regulations issued here.

Lightning Strikes Oil Tank.

Beaumont, Tex., Aug. 1.—Damage estimated at $125,000 was caused near Sabre when lightning struck a tank belonging to the Mignin Petroleum company. Fifty-five thousand barrels of crude oil were destroyed.

More Coal Mined.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Returns on coal output in the seventeenth week of the strike, July 24-29, give the first test of the response to the invitation to reopen mines. There has been a slight recovery.

The midsummer bazaar by the Ladies' Aid was a splendid success in every way. The array of things on sale was large and unusually fine, and the buying was lively. The dinner and supper were delicious and greatly relished by the large numbers who patronized the bazaar. Great credit is due to the wide-awake and efficient president, Mrs. W. W. Runyard, and the able heads of the various departments of the work; and the whole church is truly grateful to them and all the workers who helped to make the entire affair so high a success.

Some more new faces appear in the Sunday school. Let every class be constantly working for new members. And let all members of the school be determined never to miss unless too sick to get out of bed.

A goodly number participated in the Lord's supper Sunday morning, in humble confession of Christ as the only possible means of escape from their sins, through His atoning death, and all went away from the Lord's table with a deepened determination to be absolutely obedient and loyal to Christ in all circumstances and at all costs.

The evening discourse was upon "The Witness of the Spirit." The text was "The spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God." His great truth was illustrated with an account of John Wesley's conversion. The strict, religious life of this remarkable man was traced for a number of years before his actual conversion. His much praying, visiting the sick and prisoners, intense study of the Greek new testament, fiery preaching, and prodigious labors were described. His three years with Oglethorpe in the debtor colony in Georgia, his return to England, his consciousness that there was something at the very heart of religion which he did not possess—all this was described. Then his clear realization that the thing he did not possess was real saving faith. He received from the Moravians such descriptions of the life of faith, so full of holy peace and intense happiness that he was astonished. He doubled his seeking. Many days he sought with great intensity. Finally, one evening in London, he was listening to some one read Martin Luther's preface to Paul's Epistle to the Romans. Wesley says: "At about a quarter before nine, while he (the reader of Luther's work) was describing the change which God works in the heart through faith, I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation. And an assurance was given me that He had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death."

This is the witness of the spirit of God to our hearts that are His children, the very heart of religion. In this is the beginning of all the richness of real life for every soul. This is the glorious heritage of the followers of Christ.

The discourse closed with an impassioned appeal for every one to make sure of this experience of the witness of the spirit, determinedly seeking until it comes.

Conducts Tour of Our Lake County Farms

Lindenhurst farm has a fine showing of Duroc hogs and Guernsey cattle. The crowd was shown around the place and building by H. K. Ray. An indication of the size they are working for in pork production may be gotten from the weight of one of the ten months old boars that tipped the scales the day before at 454 pounds.

The statements regarding sweet clover made by Mr. Lang at the experiment field were demonstrated on the farm of C. E. and J. G. Bonner where 18 acres of sweet clover is furnishing pasture for 20 cows, 16 heifers, 14 ewes, 20 lambs, 2 mares and their colts and 25 pigs. The cows were turned on the pasture May 14 and for six weeks received no other feed. The Bonners said this was the first time they had ever turned on grass in the spring and had a continued increase in milk flow.

R. J. Murrie's small farm of 14 acres was the last one visited. Mr. Murrie explained how he cared for his flock of 350 White Leghorns so as to bring him a net return above feed cost of $3.06 per hen per year for eggs alone. He gives them a well balanced ration and never changes rations suddenly. Exercise, fresh air and clean quarters play an important part in success with poultry. As soon as a "boarder" is discovered in Mr. Murrie's flock she is sold.

The combination of poultry and fruit yield a good living from only a few acres.

8,000 HIKING CLUBS IN GREATER NEW YORK

They Swing Along Highways and Through Woods in Groups of Varying Size.

New York.—One must walk nowadays to be in the swim. Statistics gleaned from the out-door departments of the newspapers, from the Boy Scout and Campfire Girls' organizations, from the Y. M. C. A. branches and kindred bodies, from scores of amateur athletic clubs and from the leading dealers in sporting goods, indicate that today there are no less than 8,000 hiking clubs in Greater New York, with a total membership of more than a quarter of a million men and women, who are keeping themselves in the pink of condition and experiencing the real joy of living by getting regularly out into the open country with no other means of locomotion than their God-given legs.

The city of New York has taken official notice of the movement. On three occasions recently Mayor Hylan has congratulated the boys and girls of the public schools upon their enthusiasm in taking up the new sport of hiking. In his dedication of the great new public playground in the Bronx the other day Mayor Hylan extolled the athletic tendencies of the boys and girls and impressed upon them that there was no better or more profitable way in which they could pass their vacations and utilize their holidays than by the excursions into field and forest of their walking clubs. He gave the same message to the Amateur Athletic Union of Brooklyn a few days later, and when a club of East Side boys and girls visited him at city hall preparatory to a hike to the tomb of Roosevelt at Oyster Bay he assured them that the best walkers among them would make the best citizens.

Walk and Be Well
 No less enthusiastic a champion of the walking game is Dr. Royal S. Copeland, city health commissioner. "The benefit to health and the safeguard to morals to be found in long walks," said Dr. Copeland in an interview, "are too apparent to speak of them. If one takes long walks alone it is well, for he walks the road of health, but if he takes long walks in company it is better for he adds the tonic of companionship to his exercise. Walking is the one form of exercise in which there is the minimum risk of overdoing it. In short, I consider walking the most beneficial of all exercises and it is never out of season." "Never in my life-time," said Edward R. Wilbur, manager of a nationally known sporting goods store, "have I known such a demand as now for outdoor garments and shoes and stockings and appliances for the tourist's luncheon box. The rapid spread and tremendous popularity of the walking-club idea has no parallel in our experience."

"The hiker can make his requisite just what he feels like spending. Really, there are only two or three articles indispensable to hiking—thick walking shoes that allow lots of room, thick woolen socks and clothing that will give freedom of limb. He should have a canvas or leather musette bag, such as the soldiers used in France."

The Cow in the Knapack
 "To get the real benefit and joy out of hiking luncheon should be carried and prepared and eaten in the open. Bread and cheese, a few slices of bacon, some coffee, a can of condensed milk, and a cake of chocolate furnish high-powered fuel for the hiker and are readily and happily assimilated even by those who in their pre-hiking days were afflicted with digestive apparatus so feeble as to balk at crackers and milk. Fortunately for the hiker, he can replenish his simple larder at any cross-roads store and provide himself with the most nutritious and appetizing food in a form that can be conveniently carried."

No single development in the problem of food transportation for the hunter, fisherman, hiker and all lovers of the out-of-doors can compare with the gift bestowed by the man who first found the way to make condensed milk, thereby putting a dairy in every man's knapsack. Before long there will be a national association of hikers, and Gall Borden will be its patron saint. Such an association could do much to encourage the spread of the most beneficial and universal of all outdoor pastimes, map out interesting routes, secure the establishment of shelters, rest-stations, and camp sites at suitable locations, and insure the rights of pedestrians on country roads."

Film That Pleases Royalty Entertains American Public

After seeing "Gypsy Passion," adapted from Jean Richepin's story, "Miarka," the child of the bear, her Majesty Queen Alexandra sent a message to Louis Mercanton, the producer, telling him how much she enjoyed his presentation of the famous novel, it was so wonderfully well filmed, acted and presented.

This picture is based on Jean Richepin's classic "Miarka," and was shown at Marlborough House to Queen Alexandra, the Queen of Norway, the Princess Royal, and members of the Royal household. At the close their majesties expressed great admiration of Mme. Rejane's acting and Louis Mercanton's artistic production.

Princess Mary, Princess Maud, Princess Christian, Princess Beatrice, the Duke of Manchester, Lady Cynthia Asquith, Lady Sackville, Mrs. John Gordon, Lady Tree and Miss Viola Tree, Lady Alexander, Lady and Miss Marjoribanks, Lord and Lady Islington, Baron and Baroness Emilio d'Er-Saymour and Mr. George Grossmith, made up the audience at Marlborough House during a showing of "Gypsy Passion."

It is the first time that members of the Royal family had been present at a pre-release showing of a picture, which was shown by special demand at the Empire Theater, London, at the request of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt.

"Gypsy Passion" will be shown at the Crystal Theatre on Friday and Saturday, August 4 and 5.

EMMERSON TO AID ENFORCEMENT OF AUTOMOBILE LAWS

Instructs Inspectors to Co-Operate in Compelling Obedience to Safety-First Rules.

OBSERVANCE SAVES LIVES

With So Many Cars in Operation Strict Compliance Is Imperative.

Automobile investigators, working under orders from Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson, will devote a great deal of attention this summer to enforcement of safety-first laws of the road. These investigators were used the first time last year by the secretary of state under an act adopted by the last general assembly. There is only a limited number of them and their time this season has been devoted so far principally to rounding up automobile owners who have failed to secure 1922 licenses. They have this work well in hand now and during the remainder of the season will also pay attention to other automobile laws.

They will urge local authorities to co-operate fully in the enforcement of all these laws.

What Law Provides.

Safety-first laws of the road include the following:

Regulation regarding the dimming of headlights.

Requiring that automobiles be stopped before going over a grade crossing where there is a "Stop" sign, and that at all other crossings slow down to 10 miles per hour.

Limiting the speed of automobiles to 10 miles per hour in business sections of cities and villages, 15 miles per hour in residence sections, 20 miles per hour in sparsely settled sections, and not to exceed 30 miles an hour on the public highways.

Requiring that automobiles be equipped with good brakes and suitable signalling device.

Prohibiting any person under fifteen years of age from driving a motor vehicle on the public highways unless accompanied by the owner or a licensed chauffeur.

Giving the right of way to persons coming from the right.

Requiring that vehicles keep to the right in passing vehicles coming from the opposite direction and that they pass to the left of vehicles going in the same direction.

GLARING HEADLIGHTS ENDANGER LIFE

Below—Good light, but no glare.

Prohibiting the driver from turning or stopping without giving a signal by outstretched arm or otherwise.

Prohibiting the driving of an automobile within 10 feet of a street car loading or discharging passengers, except by the express direction of a traffic officer.

Inspectors Will Act.

"In the past," Secretary of State Emmerson says, "we have urged strict compliance with all of these safety-first laws, and have asked local authorities to do all in their power to enforce them. That was all we could do until the last legislature gave my office power to appoint inspectors with authority to make arrests."

"Of course, with the limited number of inspectors at my command, I cannot hope actively to enforce these laws in every community, but the inspectors will be moved about in such a way as to get the maximum result. By calling on local authorities at frequent intervals and by publicity, they will be of great benefit in enforcing all of the road laws just as they have been in decreasing violations of the state license law."

"Notwithstanding the remarkable growth in the number of automobiles from 35,000 to nearly 700,000 in the last ten years, laws regarding their operation have kept pace with changing conditions and the safety provisions relative to the operation of motor vehicles on the public highway are ample for the protection of the public. Like every other law, however, unless these regulations are strictly enforced, they fail in their object."

Would Save Life.

"I am firmly convinced that strict compliance with the laws of the road would decrease the number of automobile accidents to practically nothing."

"According to the Division of Vital Statistics of the Department of Public Health, there were 734 fatalities in the state in 1920 due to automobile accidents. Four hundred and fifty of these were in Chicago and 284 in the downstate. Nearly all of these were caused by the failure of one or both parties concerned to obey the rules of the road. Unless these rules are obeyed the automobile, which in other respects is one of the greatest boons of this age, becomes a menace. It should be the concern of every good citizen to report any infraction of the law."

CIRCUS ACTS ARE FEATURE AT FAIR

Central States Exposition Books
Biggest Attractions for August Event—May Wirth Headliner.

Entertainment acts which have been recruited from leading circuses, vaudeville circuits and from the New York Hippodrome and Winter Garden, will make up the program that will be staged in front of the grandstand each night at the coming Central States Exposition, Aurora, August 18 to 20.

An all-star bill is what the management has in store for visitors. First and foremost of these features is May Wirth, the world's greatest equestrienne. Miss Wirth, who started for years with the Ringling brothers and at the New York Hippodrome, will appear in the premier riding act of the century. Miss Wirth performs more daring and thrilling somersaults and stunts on the back of a horse than most persons even believe possible. She is coming to the fair direct from London.

Burt Earl and his Eight Girls, in a mad, merry, musical melange, will present the same act in which they appeared before the royalty of Europe. Every member of Mr. Earl's troupe is a California beauty.

An act that will appeal equally as much to the grown-ups as the children will be Pink's Comedy Mule Circus. This act is generally conceded to be the best animal comedy act in the world. It has been dubbed the "act of a thousand laughs."

Belleair Brothers, athletes, will appear in a sensational hand-balancing act. These prothers, modern Apollos, climax their thrilling act with a "looping-the-loop" number, in which one of the brothers, riding a small carriage, descends from the top of a steep incline, does a loop, leaps into space, and is caught hands to hands by his brother.

The Aerial Patts, trapeze performers; the Four Dunbars, comedy acrobats; Joe Melvin and Janet Des Grosellier, comedy jugglers and artistic hoop manipulators; Ross King Trio, in their style show on a silver wire; Stafford Comedy Animal Circus; Worden Brothers, celebrated upside-down jugglers and the Three Flying Florids in their marvelous culling act, complete the program.

General Grant's Boyhood.

Ulysses Grant was what was called in the neighborhood of Georgetown, O., where he lived from his second year until he was sent to West Point academy, "a horsey boy." He liked horses—liked to ride and drive them and to work with them. A horsey boy was not expected to take kindly to books, and Ulysses was behind most of the boys of his age in the school at Georgetown, except only in arithmetic. Teachers at that time gave their pupils mental arithmetic before they took up the written work, and in doing the problems given the classes in mental arithmetic young Grant proved a star.

LAKE COUNTY FAIR

"Where City and Country Meet"
LIBERTYVILLE, ILLINOIS

Farm Bureau News

BY
C. E. WHELOCK of Libertyville, Ill.

State Picnic Will Be Held August 29
The annual state picnic of the I. A. A. to be held at Olney, Richland county, will take place on Wednesday, August 23, according to a report from the committee which met recently at Olney to set a date for the celebration. The picnic is being held a little earlier than those of previous years, the picnic of last year at Dixon coming during September.

Begin Preparations

Already plans are being formulated for the event and farm bureau enthusiasts in Richland county hope to make the occasion a memorable affair in the I. A. A. picnic history.

"Olney and Richland county are going to show visitors to the picnic," says the Olney Times, "that we can put on a celebration which will rank with them all. We have the spirit and we can do it."

Big Special Edition

Arrangements have been completed with the Olney Daily Times for publishing a special edition of from eight to sixteen pages about the picnic. This special edition will be printed on the day of the picnic and 2,500 copies will be distributed free of charge to picnic visitors. The publicity department of the I. A. A. will furnish the copy going into the special.

Getting Horseshoes Ready

Horseshoe pitchers are preparing for one of the most interesting tournaments ever held. Many counties are planning to send teams to compete for the championship. The De Witt county champion team of last year's picnic will be on hand to make an effort to retain the cup they won at Dixon. The "barnyard golf" exhibition is one of the headliners at the state picnics. Held before the grandstand of the Richland county fair grounds, many county delegations will cheer their stars to victory.

Good Speaking Promised

A program of speaking by prominent inent agricultural leaders is being arranged. This part of the day's entertainment is usually given during the morning. The afternoon is then left open to a general good time, when both old and young disport themselves in various games and races. Of course, there will be the usual picnic dinner at the noon hour, a big feature in itself.

This is the first time the picnic has been held in southern Illinois, and the Farm Bureau membership of southern counties are planning to be out in full force.

Outings for 247 Children

Outings on the farm for 347 slum children of Chicago have been provided so far this summer by big-hearted members of Illinois county Farm Bureaus. The campaign is being carried on in co-operation with the Illinois Agricultural association, the Chicago Daily News and the United Charities of Chicago.

The railroads are offering free fare, so children are being sent only to counties within two hundred miles of Chicago.

The youngsters range in age from five to twelve years. Last summer 314 of them were given outings in Farm Bureau homes.

They are selected only from the most worthy homes. The outings are to most of them their first experience of fresh air, sunshine and grass.

TENT CITY FOR FAIR VISITORS

Central States Exposition Will Provide Camping Facilities.

Visitors to the great Central States Fair and Exposition, to be held at Aurora, Ill., August 18-23, will be able to remain on the grounds the entire nine days if they desire. A tented city, covering five acres, is to be located inside the park and tents may be secured for the entire nine days and nights, or for one or more days.

A family of five can lease a five room tent for the nine days for $22.50, while a two room tent can be had for $7.50, a three room for $10.00 and a four room, with hallways, for $21.50.

Families or individuals desiring to reserve quarters in the tented city should write to Clifford R. Trimble, secretary-manager, Central States Fair and Exposition, Aurora, Ill., for reservations.

St. Ignatius' Church News

Regular services: Holy communion, 8:00, except third Sunday; church school, 8:45; Morning prayer, 10:00, except third Sunday; holy communion, 10:00, third Sunday.

Last Sunday it was a great pleasure to have with us the Rev. Vernon A. Weaver, of Concordia, Kansas. Mr. Weaver was a classmate at the seminary with Mr. Brock and Mr. Kolkebeck, and has always been interested in St. Ignatius' church, Antioch. At the early Eucharist Mr. Weaver, who is in Deacon's Orders, served and acted as deacon administering the chalice. At the late service he read the service. We were most pleased to have him with us. He is at present in the missionary district of Salina, Kansas. He will be ordained to the priesthood next October.

Following the wishes of Father Batty, the priest in charge, the early Eucharist from now on will be at 8:00 on Sunday mornings instead of 7:00 as it has been heretofore. It is very hard for the priest in charge to come all the way from Libertyville every Sunday morning and get here that early, and it will also be more convenient for some of the lake people who come as far as eighteen miles to attend that service. It should also be more convenient for our own Antioch people although the interval between the early service and the church school session will be very short. The time of church school and morning prayer will remain the same until the summer is over.

On Tuesday of this week a card party is being held at Winch's Channel Lake pavilion, and everyone is invited to attend. The last one was very successful indeed and it is our intention to reach by post card all people interested before each party.

On Wednesday of this week an all day meeting of the Ladies' Guild is being held at the home of Mrs. Oliver Kettlehut. There will only be one more meeting of the Guild after this meeting before the hazaar, and so the last two meetings are of the utmost importance.

Last Sunday's sermon was concerned with the story of the Exodus of the children of Israel from the land of Egypt. The Pharaoh of the Exodus is like many people of the present day who have to undergo plagues in order to soften their hearts towards God and His holy religion. The faithful Christians are like the children of Israel who had to undergo many trials and tribulations, but who finally left the land where they were in bondage, because they were God-fearing. All of life is like the Exodus. It is a constant struggle between selfishness and neglect of God, and the better side of our nature. There are too few people in this world who are able to stand firm for what is good and right, when the whole world is against them. The faithful Christian is he who fears not what man may do or say against him, because he knows he is right, and will finally conquer all obstacles. The courage of one's convictions is indeed a christian virtue. Most people are really religious in the end, although they may hide it for a while, and only "the fool hath said in his heart, there is no God."

Next Sunday is the eighth Sunday after trinity, and the services are Holy communion at 8, church school at 8:45 and morning service and address at 10. Come and bring your friends.

How The Master Driver Became Master Tire Builder

IN 1903, driving the "999" racing car, Barney Oldfield started his career of victories that later earned him the title of "Master Driver of The World." To overcome the tire weaknesses that made racing difficult and dangerous, he studied tires—specified materials—supervised construction.

Today, Barney Oldfield is known as the "Master Tire Builder." Starting with the crude tires which carried the "999" one mile in sixty seconds, Oldfield gradually developed his famous Cords—a set of which covered 500 miles at eighty-eight miles an hour without a change.

In three years Oldfield tires have won every important race on American speedways. They are the only American tires that have ever taken first place in the French Grand Prix. They have won for three consecutive years in the 500-mile Indianapolis Sweepstakes. So far in 1922, Oldfields have lowered four World's Records and seven track records.

The Wichita Test Run gave evidence of Oldfield superiority in touring—when a set of four Cords covered 34,525 miles over rutted, frozen, winter roads—a performance attested by the Mayor of Wichita.

See your dealer and get a set of these rugged tires that Barney Oldfield has developed and perfected through a lifetime of practical tire experience. Their performance will convince you that they are "The Most Trustworthy Tires Built."

Glaced Grasshoppers.

A sight that would have gladdened the heart of John the Baptist is shown in photographs of the newly discovered grasshopper glacier in the northern corner of Yellowstone National park.

These pictures, just received by the geological survey, show imbedded in the ice thousands of strata of grasshoppers of extinct species of a time long before the period in which the insects were considered deleterious.

These glaced grasshoppers must have been flying over the mountains in living clouds of millions when they were caught in snowstorms and frozen into the glacier.

Motorists are visiting the remarkable glacier by the thousands this summer.

HOOVER'S COAL PLAN IN ACTION

Starts Functioning as Reports Fail to Reveal Resumption of Mining.

HENRY B. SPENCER IN CHARGE

Number of Governors Announce Appointment of State Purchasing—Distributing Agencies to Supervise Coal Allotments.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Working plans under which government coal distribution will operate were completed at a conference of the President's coal committee with Henry B. Spencer, federal coal distributor, the advisory committee of producing operators and other government agencies.

Preliminary to this conference the operators' advisory committee was in conference earlier allotting territory and forming district committees to function in the producing fields. On these local committees will rest responsibility in seeing that coal is loaded and shipped from the mines in accordance with distribution orders clearing through the bureau at Washington.

Coal Distributor Spencer received telegrams from a number of governors announcing appointment of state purchasing and distributing committees or agencies, to see that coal allotted to each state is properly distributed and profiteering prevented.

It actually marks the setting up and beginning of operations by the coal distribution. Offices were opened a block from the Department of Commerce and just around the corner from the interstate commerce commission and in the same building with the American Railway association's car service organization. This location centralizes all the agencies concerned with the physical operation of the distribution program.

Mr. Spencer reports for the past week failed to reveal any resumption of mining operations in the union fields of Pennsylvania or other unfrozen territory. While there was improvement in car loadings shown, it was in nonunion territory where operations had been hampered by inability of the railroads to move empty and loaded cars.

The Chesapeake & Ohio showed the greatest improvement in this respect. However, the slump on that road has been only partially relieved. Louisville and Nashville and Norfolk and Western loadings and car movements were about as they had been the preceding week. The embargoes declared last week, however, were expected to result in increased coal loadings this week.

WARNS COLONISTS OF FAKES

Commerce Department at Washington Exposes South American Land Swindlers.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Warning against unscrupulous promoters of colonization schemes in South America was issued by the Commerce department, which added that such promoters have been particularly active in the Western states. Many Americans going to South America as colonists have found that they have invested their savings in land in the remote wilderness, the department said.

"White South America has millions of acres of good public land," the statement said, "those who are acquainted with the country are of the opinion that Americans contemplating going there as settlers should make careful investigation of such factors as transportation facilities, climatic conditions, etc., before investing in any colonization scheme. The Department of Commerce is in a position to render material assistance in any such investigation."

Senator Calder of New York announced that he has been studying the question and may offer such an amendment when the bonus bill comes before the senate for consideration after the tariff bill is passed.

The senator pointed to the results of recent polls on the beer and wine question as evidence that such a change in the Volstead law might be popular throughout the country.

AT WORK ON WET MEASURE

Senate to Consider Amendment to Bonus Bill Permitting 3 Per Cent Beer.

Washington, Aug. 2.—An amendment to the soldier bonus bill authorizing the manufacture of 3 per cent beer and subjecting it to a tax sufficient to raise the amount of the bonus is being seriously considered in the senate.

Senator Calder of New York announced that he has been studying the question and may offer such an amendment when the bonus bill comes before the senate for consideration after the tariff bill is passed.

The senator pointed to the results of recent polls on the beer and wine question as evidence that such a change in the Volstead law might be popular throughout the country.

When Baby Complains.

THERE ARE MANY WAYS a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure-all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Let's Think It Over.

There is such a thing as saying too much on any subject, and the "grand-stand" talker sooner or later becomes a bore. The truth is always welcomed, and the truth reiterated and confirmed is more than welcome—it reaches your innermost soul.

Fletcher's Castoria is all its advertising has claimed for it. Scrutinized by the microscope of public opinion and used for over thirty years it stands without a peer in the hearts of thoughtful, cautious, discerning Mothers. And once used, mother love—there is no substitute for mother love—will scorn to try a "substitute" or a "just-as-good".

Masquerading under many names drugs that are injurious to the tender babe have found their way into some households, but the light of experience soon casts them out. Are they cast out before it is too late? MOTHERS SHOULD READ THE BOOKLET THAT IS AROUND EVERY BOTTLE OF FLETCHER'S CASTORIA.

THE GENIUS

By MILDRED WHITE

Copyright, 1912, Western Newspaper Union.

When David Morton first met her, he thought that he had found the fairest and cleverest of women. After a month's acquaintance he was of the same opinion. Josephine Le Mar was as sweet tempered as charming. David congratulated himself that, owing to Mrs. Davenport's influence, he was permitted the boon of Josephine's friendship.

Mrs. Davenport chose to bestow upon the gifted Miss Le Mar her social favor. It was she, in her pretentious home, who brought her two favorite young people together. To her husband alone, she admitted match-making talent. Her interested efforts heretofore, where Josephine was concerned, had met with discouragement.

"Dear Mrs. Davenport," Josephine had amusedly remarked, "my time is devoted to my work. Men outside of that sphere do not claim my attention."

To which Miss Davenport replied: "Do you, then, intend to devote your life to drawing twisted letters for advertising purposes?"

"I hope," Josephine firmly responded, "to do more than that. Bigger things—covers for magazines, which will be admired throughout the country. The twisted letters are but stepping stones to my achievement."

And so determined was the girl in this purpose that Mrs. Davenport for a time despaired. Then, along came David. That Josephine was interested in David there was no doubt.

The elder woman, fearing to awaken the girl to this growing interest, happened not to notice the happy conversations between the two.

Josephine kept solitary house in a tiny apartment, which even in its humbleness was, as Mrs. Davenport said, "as charming as the girl's own personality."

David grew to look forward with ever-increasing pleasure to evenings spent in Josephine's cozy sitting room, with its golden shaded lights. Mrs. Davenport port would often be there, playing on Jole's piano. Her friends called her this, after Jole had haltingly told them of her life before coming to the city.

"I came," she said, "after father died. There was no opportunity before. I wanted to study art, and earn my living. Isabel, my youngest sister, had never been strong, but now she is happy in grandmother's care. At home I was called Jole."

David was an inspiration to her; frankly she told him so. He liked to think out for her, helpful suggestions. Then, into this mutual confidence came a disturbing element. Just as David was rejoicing in the sweet simplicity of Josephine's disposition, she met him one evening, coldly, indifferently. In vain he tried to dispel the constraint, leaving perplexed. Upon his next visit Josephine appeared distraught; it was impossible to arouse her interest. When David impatiently remarked that he would no longer bore her with his presence, Josephine arose immediately, relieved, it seemed, to bid him good-night.

Nevertheless, David's love insisted upon the telling, and he went one evening to make declaration. He entered Josephine's sitting room through a door left open to the spring air, and found the girl shaken by silent sobbing. Like a desolate child, she lay curled on the couch, her face buried in its pillows.

"Jole," cried David tenderly, "Jole, dear."

"I wish," came a curt voice from the pillows, "you would go away."

David went, vowing not to return, but love is stronger than a strong man's will. David told himself it would be the right thing to inquire for Jole, and if all was well with her he would try to forget. He must first know that she had no need.

A strange young woman opened the door of Jole's apartment—yet not a stranger, surely, with Jole's blue eyes and her soft voice.

"My sister is not in," said the woman. "I am Isabel." She led the way to the sitting room, and David saw that she leaned on a cane. "Jole does not know that I am here," she went on. "Grandma said we would surprise her. We came in to see the great surgeon. Jole will be so rejoiced when she hears our good news. Of course we have heard of you from my sister, Mr. Mortimer. Perhaps you would like to know the good news, too."

"I am sure that I would," answered David wonderingly.

"The surgeon assures us that my hip may be cured by an operation. I think that I am more glad for Jole's sake than my own. She has grieved all her life, because when she was much too young to have the care of an orphaned baby sister I fell from her arms down a stair. Since she came to the city she has labored to give me the benefit of expert medical advice. A few weeks ago when a mistaken physician told Jole that I could not be helped she almost gave up altogether. She had been so happy in the privilege of her art; but she wrote me then that she intended to devote her life to me. Darling, foolish Jole. So, you see what the good news will mean to her. Jole is wonderful, greater than genius. Oh, you cannot know."

"I love her," David said. "Do you think—could there be a possible chance for me?"

Isabel smiled. "There will be now," she said.

So, humbly, remorsefully, David walked with the little sister.

Birds in the Dark.

Not a few birds practically red their nestlings in the dark, says the American Forestry Magazine. Well-known examples of this are seen in sand-martins and kingfishers—birds that dig, or scrape out, long burrows in banks, and lay their eggs at the farther end of them.

Snap Judgment Unreliable.

To be right most of the time you must aim to be right all of the time. That means constant effort to understand each problem that comes up. Snap judgment is like shooting in the dark. It generally misses the mark.

Unethical.

Blobs—"I was pretty well down in the world when my idea suddenly struck me." Slobbs—"It's a cowardly idea that would strike a man when he is down."
